The power of writing can help us move through our grief. With great empathy, drawing on thoughts from What Remains When We Die, compassionate questions and brief writing exercises, journalist and funeral speaker Louise Brown encourages griever to write down their thoughts and feelings about their loss and their memories of the life they shared with the person who passed away. For she is convinced that grief tells an important story: if people are mourning, it is because they have had the opportunity to experience love and deep human connection.

Louise Brown, born in London in 1975, moved with her family to East Holstein in northern Germany as a teenager. She studied political science in northern England, Kiel and Berlin. She is a journalist and has also been a funeral orator in Hamburg for several years, where she facilitates the first ›Death Café‹. In her podcast My Perfect Burial she talks to people about how they want to say their goodbyes. Louise Brown lives in Hamburg with her partner, two children and a dog.
